A Tragedy in the Air

The flight from London to South Africa didn't begin at 9 o'clock. It was a little delayed. The plane belonged to the British Airways. It was a big plane with four engines.

At ten o'clock we started. I sat next to Michael. He is a former pilot but now he works as a lawyer. Michael is my permanent companion in my journeys to Africa. This trip promised to be very interesting. It included our visits to several villages situated in the South of the continent. The trip could offer many unusual things.

At eleven o'clock when we were over the British Channel Michael told me he didn't like the sound of the engine. Soon the stewardess said that something was not quite right with the engine again. She told us it wasn't very important as there were three good engines on the plane and we were "OK".

However, when we got near Africa, the passengers were telling each other that the second and the third engines didn't work. We all felt rather bad. At that time we were flying over the land of Africa with its wild animals; tigers, lions, and snakes. We were thinking about death.

Suddenly we heard the captain's voice on the plane radio, "Ladies and gentlemen, I have bad news for you".

I saw that many faces became white. Some people began crying. I felt terrible. The captain continued in a loud voice: "I have to inform that England has lost her last football match against Scotland!"

1. Was the flight delayed?
2. How many engines did the plane have?
3. Who lost a football match?
